FOCUS AND SCOPE

The Asia Pacific Higher Education Research Journal (APHERJ), an international multidisciplinary peer-refereed journal, publishes quality and high impact researches addressing issues and concerns of education and teacher education, social sciences, engineering and technology and educational policy and business education in the Asia Pacific Rim. It provides a forum for dissemination of qualitative and quantitative researches on theory and instructional model building, product development, policy studies, internationalization as well as local responsiveness from different countries and cultures. It aims to bridge the gap between theory and practice through the publication of empirical research which are relevant and contributory to solving higher education problems.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

This journal aims at providing a venue to:

1. Share researches that have national and international impact;
2. Open opportunities for faculty, staff, students to publish their research and increase their academic visibility through publication;
3. Strengthen the academic synergy among members of HEIs in the region and in the international arena for research collaboration; and
4. Promote , utilize, apply, and commercialize researches for the benefit of global communities
